

NEWS OF COURTS

A jury in Judge Harter's court Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict of $300 in favor of David Kane, the plaintiff, in a $300 recovery suit against John F. Zimmerman and Katherine Zimmerman. The case started last Friday and was instituted by the plaintiff for the recovery of $300, which he maintained the defendants had persuaded him to invest in a mythical lumber company with holdings in Tennessee. Interest on the $300 from September 18, 1906, was not allowed by the jury.

DIVORCE PETITION.

Hazel L. Bendure charges gross neglect of duty in her divorce petition filed Wednesday against Clyde Bendure. The couple was married in 1907. She wants alimony and restoration to her maiden name of Hazel L. Heckman.

PETITION FOR SALE OF PROPERTY.

The Youngstown Macaroni company has brought suit against Maria Reda and others, including the Alliance Building & Savings company, asking for the sale of certain property in Alliance owned by the defendants and upon which the Building & Savings company holds a mortgage. The macaroni company on February 7 recovered a judgment of $156.19 and costs against Maria Reda and others associated in business with her in Alliance. The money, however, could not be collected owing to the mortgage.

Oldest Home in Canton; the Herbst Residence

Interesting Paper By Miss Lillie B. K. Herbst, Read at Horticultural Society Meeting.

The March meeting of the Stark County Horticultural society was held at the Herbst residence (known as the old Kaufmann home), No. 336 South Market street. On this occasion an interesting account of this landmark of Canton was read by Miss Herbst, a granddaughter of the owner. The paper follows:

"Members of the Horticultural society and friends, we today bid you welcome into the oldest home of our city. As few of you will know of the history of this ancient landmark, I have prepared a brief paper for your benefit. "The old Kaufmann home, located on the corner of Market and Ninth streets, was built in 1811, and bought by my grandfather, Peter Kaufmann, in the year 1832, before the last of the red men were driven from our soil. "Peter Kaufmann, wife and family took possession of this home, after a very dreary overland trip from their Columbus county farm, making the trip part of the way in wagons, and the rest on foot. A pet cow accompanied the household to the new home and was led by my grandmother the entire distance.

"This home was built for a tavern, and used as such for years until it came into possession of Mr. Kaufmann. During the building of this home, while the carpenters were upon the roof shingling, as the story goes, and sold by Judge Sowers, father, an apprentice at carpentering, in the midst of their work in the early afternoon, darkness appeared, which finally prevented the men from proceeding with their work, chickens went to roost, and the people became alarmed, not knowing what it meant, and fearing the world was coming to an end. It was some time before it was learned it was an eclipse of the sun. Daylight was again hailed with much joy. In those days the almanac was scarce reading matter.

"Peter Kaufmann was the first to publish an almanac in this part of the country, which was carried across the state of Ohio and into Pennsylvania in old fashioned peddler wagons to the old Quaker City of Philadelphia. Here a good portion of the trading was done for the little town. The necessities of life, merchandise, books and drugs, the latter of which were little needed in those days, were exchanged for the little almanac. "The receipt of this little book was hailed with as much pleasure as we today look to our daily papers. Peter Kaufmann also edited and published the German paper called 'Der Vaterland's Freund und Geistes Leit', translated, 'The Fatherland's Friend and Spirit of the Age.' Besides his able corps of assistants he was assisted in his printing establishment by his faithful wife, who with him worked hard for the welfare of his paper and to enlighten its readers. "Within the walls of this home were raised a large family of children, all now deceased, with the exception of one son and three daughters—H. S. Kaufmann, cashier of City National bank, Canton; Mrs. Lydia Urthnagle of Columbus, O.; Mrs. Louise Behlen, Cleveland, O.; and Mrs. Maria M. Herbst, who with her family live in the old home.

"Here also were born two of Canton's most prominent and pioneer citizens, James A. Saxton, now deceased, whose father, John Saxton, published the Canton Repository for many years. "John F. Reynolds, deceased, for years owner of Canton's gas and coke plant, was also born here. Mr. Reynolds' kindness and generosity of soul is still in evidence on our public squares, where man and the poor dumb brute can quench their thirst. The memory of such men will ever live in the heart of his fellowman. "Mr. Kaufmann in politics was an ardent and very enthusiastic Democrat.

"It was during the administration of General Jackson that Jonathan F. Woodside of Chillicothe received the appointment of charge d'affaires to Denmark. Mr. Woodside arranged a trip over his state before his departure as a diplomat to a foreign country. Mr. Woodside and my grandfather being very good friends, an invitation was extended and accepted by Mr.

Woodside to visit Canton on his trip and be a guest at the Kaufmann home.

"Mr. Woodside appeared in Canton attended by a valet d'chamber, rigged in gold lace, who followed along behind his master as they promenade the streets, accompanied by some of the prominent Democrats of the town. They were 'the observed of all observers,' as was stated, the small boys following along as they do the present day to see the elephants. Part of the attention shown Mr. Woodside was a dinner given by Mr. Kaufmann at his home, to which eighteen guests were invited, all prominent and influential Democrats and party leaders of the day. The guests, whose names will be recalled by some of you were: Professor Lehman, Dr. Stinger, Sanders Van Ranslaer, William and John Dunbar, Peter Loutschmeyer, D. A. Starkweather, Nicholas Stump, Daniel Gottshall, Judge Sowers, Arnold Lynch and Judge Greenwood of Paris, Thomas Blackburn and Alexander McCully of Massillon.

"The table was set in the parlor where you are now assembled, set in the shape of the letter L, and the menu consisted of roast goose, baked ham, mashed potatoes, lettuce, beets, cucumber salad, several varieties of cake, which were much commended, coffee, tea and wine. In those early days the ice dishes which contribute so much to a nice dinner of today were unknown. The entertainment was regarded as a very swell affair and furnished comment for a long time afterward.

"Peter Kaufmann and his good wife were both greatly interested in agriculture and horticulture. They were the possessors of some of the finest farm land of Stark county. Grain was hauled into town and stored in the rooms above of this home, then considered the mansion of the town. Here it was kept till the market afforded a ready sale.

"On this plot of ground, fruits, vegetables and flowers have been carefully grown and cultivated ever since the place was bought by my grandfather and up to the present time.

"The work and labor of our garden plot will repay the toilers, a walk among the vegetables and God's messengers, the flowers, makes us feel we are well rewarded.

"In closing, I will not bid you goodbye but as a reward, and come and see us at some future time."

Claims Creditor Took Away His Goods

Now Alliance Man Will File Motion In United States Court Against Creditor.

Claiming that D. P. Conser, one of his creditors, had disregarded all legal formalities and carted away household goods valued at $1000, which were being held as assets, Charles C. Consey of Alliance, who recently filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, will file a motion in the United States district court at Cleveland, Thursday, citing Conser for contempt of court.

In addition to this suit has been instituted in the Stark county court of common pleas against Conser for the recovery of $1000 damages in connection with the removal of the goods.

The property, which Conser is alleged to have appropriated, consisted of furniture and household fixtures that were being held in a storage house in Alliance until the time came for a distribution among the various creditors of Mr. Consey.

Conser, it is said, hauled away a quantity of the choicest fixtures, which he selected at his own discretion, telling the proprietors of the storage company that he had a legal claim on them.

The property was later sold to George Helmsman of Alliance, but the exact amount received is not known. Conser's claim was based on a note for borrowed money and was worth about $100. Providing he is found guilty of contempt in the district court, he will be subject to a stiff fine.

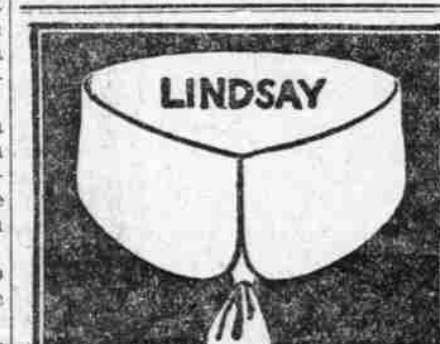

Consey went into bankruptcy February 28 last, and the first meeting of the creditors was held March 12. His liabilities amounted to less than $2000 and were almost balanced by his assets. He is being represented by Attorneys Sowers, Rice and C. A. Fisher.

SPRING OPENING

OUR Easter Opening TODAY Friday and Saturday CANTON'S PREMIER FASHION SHOW

DEAR MADAM:—

We beg to call your attention to our Millinery department in general, and particularly to our Opening Display, THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY of this week.

We have given our patrons more exclusiveness of style, and a wider choice of artistic Millinery than ever before in the history of our store. Our Manager, Miss McNally, has had wide experience in buying for many of the leading Cleveland houses, and is thoroughly well known to the exclusive houses of New York and Chicago. As she and her designers have spent almost the entire month of February in these cities, buying models and materials, and studying the styles, we are able to show you an exclusive line of models from Gage Bros., of Chicago, and the leading Fifth Avenue houses of New York, such as "Lichenstein," "Burby," "Joseph," "Gatley" and others; also designs from our own work room of which we are justly proud, as they combine all that is artistic, with quality and moderate prices.

Your inspection will be appreciated.
